'Long Shot' director Jonathan Levine on the hilarious new film's powerful message

"There's no laugh quite like the laugh of recognition."

ALL IMAGES LIONSGATE

As a society, it is staggering to see how far America still has to go when it comes to gender equality in the workforce, and even when it comes to fairness in the cult of personality that is our political system. No matter how qualified a politician truly is, female candidates face much more unrealistic scrutiny from both the public and their parties while running for higher office. This is a central point that the brand-new film "Long Shot," starring Charlize Theron and Seth Rogen, puts into its crosshairs. And while this is a deeply ingrained problem in our country's DNA, the film skewers it to perfection, creating one of the most poignant and honest satires to come out of a major film studio in recent memory.

Theron stars as Charlotte Field, U.S. Secretary of State, who is keeping the ship afloat under a bumbling ex-B-list TV star President Chambers, played with idiotic charm by Bob Odenkirk, who has fooled the public into believing he would be fit for the job after playing the commander in chief on TV. After a popular first term, Chambers decides that he has had enough of the job and sees this as the perfect opportunity to quit while he is ahead and make the next logical move in his career (a transition into film). With this decision, he gives his endorsement to Field for her run for president.

Once she hears the announcement, her team works tirelessly to improve her numbers with the public in a number of different areas including her awkward wave, which resembles an animatronic robot's movements as it is running low on electricity. While at a fundraiser, Field meets up with an old childhood friend, a recently out-of-work journalist named Fred Flarsky, played by Seth Rogen. Taken by his exuberance and willingness to speak truth to power, Field hires him on her press tour as a speechwriter. As the tour goes on, their relationship becomes a little more than professional.

While this plan to gain more "likability" should be inconsequential given her sterling record as a public official, this kind of life under a microscopic for women of a certain stature is exactly the point that the film tries to address.

"It's such an easy target and such a valid target that once you unlock that area of joke-telling, you really have unlimited potential for jokes," says the film's director, Jonathan Levine. "It kind of combines these two great things that we love: it's a humorous way to hold up a mirror to ourselves, and it's easy because it's such low-hanging fruit in our society that it was a great place to find humor. Whenever you have those two things — an opportunity to look smart and an easy way to access them — that's a nice thing in a comedy, especially when you are balancing so many different things."

Levine was thrilled at the chance to show how insane it is that this kind of standard exists in our society, but has also been blown away by how female audiences have reacted during advance screenings of the film. The message is universal whether you are in politics or not.

"It was also really important for her [Field's] story to show the insane endemic cultural misogyny that she's up against every day," Levine explains. "I think the thing about it is, it doesn't just apply to politics. When we screen this, women of all walks of life see themselves in this character's journey… the depth of it was quite eye-opening."

Apart from the powerful social message the film so successfully hammers home, it also delivers on some of the best pure gut-busting laughs you are bound to see in theaters this summer. Most notably, a scene in which Field and Flarksy have been out clubbing all night on molly when she is suddenly called in for a tense hostage negotiation. Without any spoilers, it is a scene that is destined to be a classic.

What makes "Long Shot" so enjoyable is that its relevance to our current moment only heightens each laugh. Even though the plane might be on fire, satire done this well only helps to cushion the landing.

"Whenever you can deal with identity politics this way, it really is fertile ground for comedy," says Levine. "There's no laugh quite like the laugh of recognition."

"Long Shot" also stars O'Shea Jackson Jr. and June Diane Raphael and hits theaters all over the world on Friday.

Jefferson Health saving lives with simultaneous pancreas/kidney transplants

Jefferson Health
HOME OF SIDNEY KIMMEL MEDICAL COLLEGE

ASK JEFFERSON HEALTH:

More than a hundred thousand people in the U.S. are currently waiting for kidney transplants. The experts at Jefferson Health are making big strides in shortening the wait time for many, thanks in large part to its Live Donor Program and innovative transplant options. Metro sat down with Adam Frank, M.D., F.A.C.S., surgical director of Jefferson Health's Pancreas Transplant Program, to fill in the blanks.

How many people are currently on the kidney transplant waiting list?

There are not enough deceased donor organs to go around, and that's more true in kidney than any other organ. There are half a million people on dialysis nationally, and about a fifth of those are waiting for a kidney transplant; so approximately 100,000. In the end, there's nowhere near enough organs. There are only about 16,000 deceased donor kidneys available nationally. Of course there are living donors, but the problem is that there's only approximately 6,000, so you never meet the demand.

And what about the wait for simultaneous kidney and pancreas transplant?

If you're getting these two organs together, it will likely result in getting a kidney somewhat faster than if you waited for a kidney alone. The way the rules are set up, if you're waiting for a pancreas and a kidney together, the pancreas pulls the kidney because the waiting time for a kidney alone is so long. The discrepancy between the number of patients waiting and the number of organs available is so large, but it's not as terrible for patients who are waiting for another organ. The recipient receives both organs from the same donor, and that transplant rate is sooner.

Are there any other benefits?

Yes, it has some slight advantage in terms of rejection. If you look at pancreas transplant after kidney transplant, there is a slightly higher rejection rate for that pancreas than there is if you're getting a pancreas and kidney together. It's slight, but it's something that's been known in the transplant world for many years. Perhaps the biggest advantage, however, is that the patient's diabetes may be completely resolved after a simultaneous pancreas/kidney transplant. Diabetes is a very common cause of kidney failure in this country, and it can recur after a kidney transplant. If you do a transplant and the patient doesn't fix their diabetes, the kidney could fail again. A pancreas transplant can make that a whole lot better, especially for Type 1 diabetics who are normally doing four finger sticks a day and are constantly worrying over what they're eating.

How is Jefferson's Live Donor Program helping save lives?

The deceased donor infrastructure in the U.S. is very well developed, but it isn't the solution for everybody. There are approximately 6,100 kidney transplant candidates on the kidney transplant waitlist in Pennsylvania, and less than 300 living kidney donors in PA a year. That's nothing to scoff at—300 is still an incredible number, and it's grown substantially over the years, but it's still so much less than we need. If people are willing to be living donors that's the best because patients do not need to wait on the transplant list. There are also better short- and long-term survival rates for recipients. It's the number one recommendation we make to patients.

I got a second chance at life. This summer, I'm going fishing.

A few months ago, I had a simultaneous kidney and pancreas transplant. I had stage 4 kidney disease for 10 years and was on dialysis for 15 months. Now, thanks to the Jefferson transplant team, I have a second chance at life and more summer days to reel in a big fish. And this one won't get away.

UNIDENTIFIED SERVICE DOGS

Is this lawful or sanitary for the food and customers? Not to mention those who are allergic to dogs. The law prohibits dogs in stores unless they are service dogs identified by a vest or tag for emotional support and for handicapped patrons. They are unsanitary! Why? Simply because they walk in spit, poop and urine and it's lodged in their paws. E. coli has been traced to the paws also. Dogs drool and shake their fur, which contains insects and pet dander. Unless blind, why do you need to food-shop with a dog? I spoke with the store manager and was told that there is a sign posted on the door and rightfully they are allowed inside. Dog owners get offended when asked if they are service dogs. They wouldn't be questioned if the dogs had visible service identification like a vest or tag. This is annoying to me. Let your dog be happy to see you when you come home from food shopping. Don't forget the treats!

House backs Paris agreement in first climate change bill in a decade

Senate leader McConnell called the bill "political theater."

The U.S. House of Representatives on Thursday passed its first climate-change bill in a decade, voting 231-190 to require that the Trump administration keep the United States as a party to the Paris Climate Agreement.

The Climate Action Now Act would require President Donald Trump to develop a plan for the United States to meet the goals it committed to in the Paris agreement to reduce its greenhouse gas emissions and block federal funds from being used to advance the formal U.S. withdrawal from the pact.

Trump has stood by his 2017 decision to withdraw the United States from the 2015 climate accord and has been dismissive of regulations aimed at slashing greenhouse gas emissions.

REUTERS

The bill, which passed along party lines, as expected, with three Republicans backing the measure, was meant to signal to the international community that many Americans support the Paris agreement regardless of Trump's decision to abandon it.

"Today we sent a message to the president, to the American people and to the world that we recognize the seriousness of the climate crisis, and that we intend to do our part to address it. Today we sent the message: We are still in," said Rep. Frank Pallone, chairman of the House energy committee.

Senate majority leader Mitch McConnell said the Senate would not take up the legislation, dismissing the bill as "political theater" by Democrats.

Democrats have put climate change back on the agenda in Congress after regaining the majority in the House earlier this year, holding dozens of hearings on the issue.

Many of the Democratic candidates hoping to challenge Trump in the 2020 presidential election have made climate change a top-tier issue of their campaigns. All have backed re-entering the United States into the Paris Climate Agreement. REUTERS

Vegan burger maker Beyond Meat sizzles in market debut

Shares of vegan burger maker Beyond Meat surged 84 percent in their market debut on Thursday, as investors look to cash in on the growing popularity of plant-based meat alternatives.

The stock opened at $46, well above its IPO price of $25, giving Beyond Meat a market capitalization of around $2.75 billion, including underwriters' option.

Shares surged to $50 just minutes after starting to trade and were halted due to volatility. They have since resumed trading at more than $59.

Earlier on Tuesday, the company raised the size and price of its offering after increased demand from investors. The IPO raised $240 million.

The money raised from the IPO gives Beyond Meat firepower to compete with other rivals in the increasingly crowded imitation meat market, such as Silicon Valley startup Impossible Foods.

REUTERS

Beyond Meat founder and CEO Ethan Brown on Thursday morning at the Nasdaq stock exchange called plant-based meat an "enormous opportunity for economic growth in rural America and throughout the world."

"We understand the composition of meat, we understand the architecture and year after year we collapse the gaps between our product and animal protein," Brown said of Beyond Meat, which counts actor Leonardo DiCaprio and Microsoft founder Bill Gates among its investors.

Beyond Meat's existing stockholders did not sell any shares in the offering.

The company aims to market its meatless burger patties and other products to meat-loving consumers by avoiding terms such as vegan or vegetarian and instead displaying its products in the meat case of supermarkets.

Plant-based substitutes for meat have been gaining popularity as more people shift toward vegan or vegetarian diets, amid growing concerns about animal welfare and the environmental hazards of intensive animal farming.

Tyson Foods Inc., the No. 1 U.S. meat processor, owned a 6.5 percent stake in Beyond Meat, but last week said it sold its holding, as it looks to develop its own line of alternative protein products.

Burger King and Impossible Foods last month started selling their vegan burger Impossible Whopper in and around St. Louis, Missouri, with nationwide sales expected by the end of the year. REUTERS

Pelosi accuses Barr of 'crime' as Democrats step up pressure on Trump

The White House, however, said the president is within his rights to instruct advisers.

Congressional Democrats stepped up pressure on President Donald Trump's administration on Thursday as U.S. House of Representatives Speaker Nancy Pelosi accused Attorney General William Barr of committing a crime and an influential committee chairman threatened to hold Barr in contempt of Congress.

In a defiant letter released on Thursday, the White House said Trump has the right to instruct advisers not to testify before congressional oversight probes related to the Special Counsel Robert Mueller's Russia inquiry and called Mueller's report on the matter defective.

The statements mark a sharp escalation in the conflict between Trump's administration and Democrats in Congress, who are weighing whether they should try to remove Trump from office using the impeachment process as they demand information on his taxes, his businesses and other topics.

Democrats accused the Republican president and his administration of launching a growing attack on American democracy.

Pelosi, the top Democrat in Congress, accused Barr of lying to lawmakers about his interactions with Mueller after the special counsel concluded his 22-month investigation into Russia's efforts to interfere in the 2016 U.S. election to boost Trump's candidacy.

"That's a crime," the top Democrat in Congress told reporters, referring to Barr's congressional testimony.

> "I think that the statements being made by the president of the United States as giving a blanket statement that he's not going to honor any subpoenas is obstruction of justice."
> Nancy Pelosi, House of Representatives speaker

Justice Department spokeswoman Kerri Kupec called Pelosi's allegation "reckless, irresponsible and false."

The exchange came shortly after House Judiciary Committee Chairman Jerrold Nadler threatened to hold Barr in contempt of Congress if he does not provide a full, unredacted copy of Mueller's findings. That could potentially lead to fines or imprisonment for the top U.S. law enforcement official.

Barr released Mueller's report on April 18, with some parts blacked out to protect sensitive information.

Pelosi and other leaders in the House, which is controlled by Democrats, previously had cautioned against launching the impeachment process, which would begin in the House but would face long odds of success in the Republican-controlled Senate and could alienate voters ahead of the 2020 presidential election in which Trump is seeking re-election.

But Pelosi said the Trump administration was continuing to ignore congressional subpoenas and noted that Congress launched impeachment proceedings against President Richard Nixon in the 1970s after he resisted similar demands. Nixon resigned in 1974.

"I think that the statements being made by the president of the United States as giving a blanket statement that he's not going to honor any subpoenas is obstruction of justice," Pelosi said. REUTERS

Sports betting 101: How to bet on horse racing

A primer for playing the ponies.

GETTY IMAGES

MetroBet dives into the basics of betting on horse racing.

Betting on horse racing can be both fun and rewarding if you know what you're doing. For the beginner, the volume of available wagers can be intimidating. MetroBet will explain how some of the most popular wagers at the track work.

If you're ready to bet now, GREAT! Go to NYRABets.com/MetroBet and use promo code MetroBet25 to receive a free $25 Derby win bet and a $200 new-member bonus.

Win/Place/Show

Win, Place and Show wagering is where most novice horseplayers start because these bets are very straightforward. A Win bet pays off when the horse you bet on finishes first. A Place bet covers you if your horse finishes first or second, though it will pay significantly less than a Win bet. A Show wager pays off if your selection runs first, second or third, but usually yields less than a Place bet. The typical minimum on Win/Place/Show wagers is $2.

Exacta

An Exacta wager requires the bettor to pick the top two finishers of a race in exact order. It frequently pays considerably more than just betting two horses to win and/or place while involving a little more risk. Exacta wagers can be "boxed," meaning your selections can come out in any order. You can box as many horses as you wish in an Exacta wager, though the cost will increase exponentially. For example:

$2 Exacta Box 1/2 = $4

$2 Exacta Box 1/2/3 = $12

$2 Exacta Box 1/2/3/4 = $24

If you like only one horse to win, you can do an Exacta part-wheel with that horse on top rather than the conventional Win bet in order to pursue a higher payoff. For example, a $2 Exacta part-wheel 1/2,3 would cost $4. The typical minimum on Exacta wagers is $1.

Trifecta

The Trifecta is like an Exacta wager, only it requires the bettor to pick the top three finishers of a race in exact order. Like the Exacta, a Trifecta can be boxed to increase coverage, as well as price.

$2 Trifecta Box 1/2/3 = $12

$2 Trifecta Box 1/2/3/4 = $48

$2 Trifecta Box 1/2/3/4/5 = $120

A five-horse box strategy is hardly optimal, so bettors can construct Trifectas in unique ways in order to emphasize how they believe the race will play out. For example, if the bettor believes only two horses can win but that there are three other horses that can finish either second or third, a Trifecta ticket can be built this way in order to reduce cost:

$2 Trifecta 1,2/1,2,3,4,5/1,2,3,4,5 = $64

The typical minimum on Trifecta wagers is $1, though several tracks have adopted 50-cent minimums in order to make the bet more affordable.

metro BET
NYRABets.com/MetroBet
Promo Code: MetroBet25

Superfecta

The Superfecta takes the Trifecta one step further, requiring bettors to pick the top four finishers in exact order. Superfectas can usually be played for as little as 10 cents, so a four-horse box could cost just $2.40. Of course, this wager is among the hardest to hit in horse racing.

Multi-race wagers

The Daily Double is the simplest of the multi-race wagers, requiring the bettor to pick the winner of two consecutive races. The Pick Three pays off if the bettor correctly identifies the winner of three straight races. There are also Pick Fours, Pick Fives and Pick Sixes offered in select spots on the cards of most racetracks.

NBA Playoffs Friday

MetroBet breaks down a pair of Friday night NBA playoff games.

Bucks at Celtics
Moneyline: Bucks +110, Celtics -130
Betting total: 220 points

Oddsmakers appear to be giving the Boston Celtics an enormous amount of credit for splitting the first two games of their semifinal series with the top-seeded Milwaukee Bucks. The venue now shifts to TD Garden (where the Celtics are 2-8 against the spread in their last 10 tilts) on Friday night, but getting points with the Bucks is too tempting a proposition to pass up here.

The momentum is with Milwaukee going into Game 3, as they rebounded from a stunning 112-90 loss in Game 1 with a decisive 123-102 victory in Game 2.

Bucks shooting guard Khris Middleton has been the series MVP so far, shooting 50 percent from the floor and 71.4 percent from beyond the arc to tally 44 points through two games. He's also grabbed 17 rebounds in the series.

The play: Bucks spread

Nuggets at Trail Blazers
Moneyline: Nuggets +160, Blazers -180
Betting total: 215.5 points

Damian Lillard recorded just 14 points on 5-of-17 shooting in Game 2 against Denver, and C.J. McCollum had just 20 points on 20 shots.

But Portland center Enes Kanter stepped up with 15 points, as did shooting guard Rodney Hood from off the bench.

Having no extra travel day between Games 2 and 3 suits the Trail Blazers just fine, as they're 22-9 against the spread in their last 31 games on just one day's rest. By contrast, Denver is just 5-13 against the spread in their last 18 games in the same situation.

The play: Blazers -4

Derby Day is one of the more unique days on the sports calendar as non-sports fans routinely get in on the action, along with the diehards.

The aura that any horse, and more importantly any bettor, can win big will be alive and well on Saturday for the 145th Kentucky Derby (6:30 p.m., NBC).

If you're betting on your first Kentucky Derby, your best bet is to go to the top online horse racing site at NYRABets.com/MetroBet.

By entering promo code MetroBet25 at NYRABets.com/MetroBet you will receive a free $25 Derby bet and a $200 new-member bonus.

Here's a look at the 2019 Derby field and a MetroBet pick:

The Grade I, 1 1/4-mile event carries a $3 million purse and features 20 3-year-old colts looking for their place in history.

The complexion of the Derby changed dramatically on Wednesday afternoon when it was announced that 4-1 morning-line favorite No. 12 OMAHA BEACH would scratch due to an entrapped epiglottis. He had won his last three starts, including the Rebel Stakes and Arkansas Derby at Oaklawn Park, and was the selection of Hall of Fame jockey Mike Smith over No. 17 ROADSTER, the winner of the Santa Anita Derby. His defection means that 2018 Juvenile champion No. 16 GAME WINNER (4-1) inherits the favorite's role. He looks vulnerable based on his first two starts of 2019, dropping both the Rebel and Santa Anita Derby, so we'll look elsewhere for a winner.

Tax is a good value bet at 20/1.

No. 8 TACITUS (8-1) makes just his fifth career start in the Kentucky Derby after visiting the winner's circle in three of his first four efforts for renowned trainer Bill Mott. He rallied late to take the Tampa Bay Derby off a four-month layoff two starts ago before turning back TAX in Aqueduct's Wood Memorial. Jose Ortiz, second in last year's Kentucky Derby with Good Magic, maintains the assignment on TACITUS, who should get a solid pace to work with on Saturday. TACITUS is bred to love going long.

No. 5 IMPROBABLE (5-1), like stablemate GAME WINNER, was undefeated at age 2 but has run into some trouble in his sophomore season, settling for second two straight times. However, he had a legitimate excuse in the Rebel when he was caught wide on both turns off a four-month layoff. IMPROBABLE also acted up at the gate in his first start with blinkers in the Arkansas Derby, expending precious energy. He was also forced to make a bid outside eventual winner OMAHA BEACH. Irad Ortiz Jr. picks up the assignment on IMPROBABLE, and though he's yet to win a Kentucky Derby, he's widely considered one of the best young jockeys in the country.

metro BET
NYRABets.com/MetroBet
Promo Code: MetroBet25

No. 6 VEKOMA (20-1), like most of the genuine Kentucky Derby contenders, makes his third start of 2019. He was a bit flat when finishing third in Gulfstream's Fountain of Youth Stakes before taking Keeneland's Blue Grass Stakes by 3 1/2-lengths. The Blue Grass may not have been the strongest prep run this year, but VEKOMA did what he needed to do. His speed figures are right where they need to be, and his pedigree is solid. VEKOMA's unusual running style gives the illusion that he's tiring in the stretch, but that should simply be ignored as nothing more than a quirk. Javier Castellano staying aboard VEKOMA should signal confidence. He and trainer George Weaver have won plenty of Grade Is in their respective careers, but not the Derby.

No. 2 TAX (20-1) is an intriguing starter for more low-profile connections in trainer Danny Gargan and jockey Junior Alvarado. He's produced respectable speed figures in his last three starts, all in 1 1/8-mile stakes races. TAX won the Withers to kick off his three-year-old campaign before running a game second to TACITUS in the Wood Memorial. Based on the eye test as well as his pedigree (by Arch out of a Giant's Causeway mare), it seems that TAX will truly relish the 1 1/4-mile Derby distance. If this colt manages to pull off the upset, it would be the first-ever Triple Crown race victory for both Gargan and Alvarado.

The play: TAX to WIN, CUTTING HUMOR to SHOW

Alvarez, Jacobs square off in marquee middleweight bout

The middleweights will meet in Las Vegas on Saturday night.

Canelo Alvarez will look to take the next step in becoming the undisputed middleweight champion on Saturday night when he faces IBF champion Daniel Jacobs on Saturday night at T-Mobile Arena in Las Vegas.

Alvarez (51-1-2, 35 KOs) already took the WBA and WBC middleweight titles with a rematch win over Gennady Golvkin and the WBA regular super middleweight title with an overwhelming performance against Rocky Fielding.

Saturday night will be Alvarez's first fight of 2019 and just his second bout since signing a five-year, 11-fight deal with the streaming service DAZN.

Jacobs (35-2, 29 KOs) has won his last three bouts, most recently garnering a split-decision victory over Serhiy Derevianchenko for the belt. This is Jacobs' first time fighting in Las Vegas since 2010.

In the tale of the tape, Jacobs has the advantage in height (6-foot-1 to 5-foot-9) and reach (74" to 71"), but that isn't fazing Alvarez.

"In boxing, anything can happen. That's including the knockout. If it's there, trust me, I'm going to go for the knockout," Alvarez said. "I don't care if he's bigger, stronger, it's never bothered me. I have the capability. I have the experience to overcome that and more."

Jacobs also might have the bigger chip on his shoulder as he is the underdog heading into Saturday night.

"This is the opportunity of a lifetime for me and I'm mostly excited to get in there to show the world that I am the best middleweight of my generation," he said. "I finally have an opportunity to prove it, to go against Canelo Alvarez. You guys are going to see fireworks, masterful boxing, skills, dedication, persistence, and grit, most importantly."

Phils wrap up early NL East-heavy schedule

A three-game slate against the Nationals will be the eighth series this year against divisional opponents.

JOE PANTORNO
joseph.pantorno@metro.us

As the Phillies continue to hold off the Atlanta Braves and New York Mets atop the National League East, they head into a weekend series with the Washington Nationals with plenty of divisional miles under their belt.

The three-game slate with the Nationals will be the third series already this year against Bryce Harper's former team with the Phillies holding a 2-3 record in the first five games.

It's just one portion of the NL East-heavy start to the Phillies' schedule this season.

Including the upcoming Nationals series, the Phillies will play 24 of their first 33 games in 2019 against divisional opponents. Just three of their first 11 series have come against out-of-division opponents: Two wins against the Minnesota Twins, a 1-3 trip to Colorado against the Rockies, and a two-game split with the Detroit Tigers.

So far, the Phillies have passed their early test against the NL East. A 13-8 record is an impressive one while playing in a division that is slated to be a three- or four-team race for most of the season.

The Mets are the only other team in the NL East to have a record over .500 against divisional opponents with an 11-8 mark.

Jerad Eickhoff gets the ball tonight against the Nationals. GETTY IMAGES

Philadelphia will be sending some of their (surprisingly) stronger starters to the mound for their Washington series in Jerad Eickhoff, Jake Arrieta and Zach Eflin.

In his three appearances this year, including two starts as the No. 5 arm, Eickhoff has a 2.12 ERA with 20 strikeouts in 17 innings of work. He's coming off a sterling outing against the Miami Marlins on April 26, allowing just two hits in seven innings.

The same can't be said about Arrieta, who was tagged for four runs without recording an out in the sixth inning against the Marlins. He allowed just a single run through the first five.

Eflin, who goes on Sunday, has been stellar in his last three starts, accruing a 2.84 ERA in 19 innings. He threw the Phillies' first complete game in two years last Sunday against the Marlins, giving up a run on seven hits.

The Phillies get a well-deserved break from division play after their meeting with the Nationals. They'll go 35 games without meeting an NL East opponent before taking on the Braves on June 14.
